Team Sky gives full backing to Majorca

TEAM Sky principal Sir David Brailsford faced the media at the team's winter training camp in Alcudia for the first time to be questioned by the international press over a claim of alleged doping in cycling, but he stood his ground and refused to be intimidated by questions which he has already answered time and time again. He made it clear that the matter is now in the hands of a UK Anti-Doping investigation and no wrongdoing has been done. In the meantime he confirmed that Team Sky is committed to Majorca. "I've been coming here for 20 years, Sky since 2010 and the island gives us sustainability, innovation and improvement." Full interview tomorrow.

Britain in the front seat

● Britain will be in the "front seat" to negotiate a new trade deal with the incoming administration of Donald Trump, a top Republican in the United States Senate said, the BBC reported. Senate Foreign Relations Committee chairman Bob Corker said after meeting British foreign secretary Boris Johnson that a trade deal between the two countries would be a priority as Britain prepares to leave the European Union. Ahead of the Brexit vote, president Barack Obama exhorted Britons to stay in the EU and warned that if they left they would be at "the back of the queue" for a U.S. trade deal. Corker said Johnson knows "full well" that "there is no way the United Kingdom is going to take a back seat". "They will take a front seat and I think it will be our priority to make sure that we deal with them on a trade agreement initially but in all respects in a way that demonstrates the long-term friendship that we've had for so long," Corker was quoted as saying by the BBC.
