● Foreign Secretary used his key note speech to reject the notion that Brexit would result in Britain becoming more insular. He said Britons would continue to retire to Spain, and students would still go on foreign exchanges to Europe. See Inside

Europe told to spend on defence

Brussels.—U.S. President Donald Trump's defence secretary told European allies yesterday to step up efforts to increase military budgets and warned that troop contributions to missions did not exempt them from broader spending goals, officials said.

Speaking two days after Trump proposed a 30 percent jump in U.S. military funding for Europe to deter Russia, Mattis said allies should follow the example of the United States. "He insisted NATO allies show the same kind of commitment," said a NATO official present at the closed-door meeting of defence ministers at the alliance headquarters.

U.S. officials declined to comment on Mattis' address. But diplomats said the remarks reminded Europe that he has not given up on the tough message he first brought to NATO a year ago, when he said allies needed to honour spending pledges or risk less military support from the United States.

Mattis joined defence ministers to discuss the individual plans that NATO countries have submitted for the first time to show how they will reach a target to spend 2 percent of economic output on defence every year by 2024.
